

Love

Love does not consist in gazing at one another,
But in looking outward together in the same direction.

Do not seek perfection in each other.

Do not seek to make the other into your own image,
or to remake yourself into another image.

What each most truly is will be known by the other.

It is that truth of you which must be loved.

Many things will change, but change is not the enemy of love.

Change is the enemy only of any attempt to possess.

May all that is good and true and beautiful

Abide with you now and always

Anonymous

